ARTICLE 2 Educational objective and job opportunities

The Master programme has the objective of providing methodological and operational tools required for the evaluation of urban transformation alternatives, perceived as a complex unitary whole. As a result, in the approach of the Master, there is constant attention to "existential space" and, therefore, to urban settlements of any size perceived not only as material but also immaterial; this sensitivity characterises the individual specialist contributions deriving from the multiple disciplines supporting both the interpretation of urban phenomena as well as the formulation of intervention hypotheses. The economic assessment of intervention projects, associating the Surveying of private property with that of public property, is explored in its application dimension with regard to the multiple approaches adopted by the different entities participating in the formation and transformation of the built environment.

The course is aimed, in particular, at those who deal with the development and transformation of the city and the territory as public officials, professionals, promoters of project-financing operations, real estate entrepreneurs, financial operators and the insurance sector, of the non-profit organization, essentially to all those figures who are involved in activities related to the program-manager and, more precisely, to the so-called 'Polis-Maker', a Value manager with skills in urban land management policies and in particular of urban policies promoted at UN / UNECE level. With this educational project we intend to satisfy a demand of specialists with knowledge in the technical, economic, social, corporate and legal fields, able to evaluate and analyze cases and situations, but also to organize, develop and manage projects complexes in which social and cultural factors interact with the behaviors and strategies of the different actors in the building process; these competences are associated with the growing importance of negotiating skills, also in relations between public administrations and private individuals. The Master is addressed, in particular to those involved in development and transformation of the city and local areas, such as civil servants, professionals, project-financing promoters, real estate entrepreneurs, financial and insurance operators, non-profit organizations and in essence all those who carry out activities related to program or project manager. Program is oriented to all those who's aspiration is to acquire the so-called title "Polis-maker", an expert in urban management and sustainability. Thanks to this interdisciplinary training, PolisMaker finds employment opportunities in Public Administration, Real Estate sector, Engineering companies and Architectural firms, specialized in urban transformation consultations.

The course will be provided in English.

ARTICLE 3

Content and organization of training activities

The Specializing Master will start in April 2020 and will end in April 2021.

The Master programme has the objective of providing methodological and operational tools required for the evaluation of urban transformation alternatives, perceived as a complex unitary whole. The programme is addressed, in particular, to those involved in the development and transformation of the city and the local area as civil servants, professionals, project-financing promoters, real estate entrepreneurs, financial and insurance operators, non-profit organisations and in essence all those who carry out activities related to those of the program manager and, more precisely, the so-called "Polis-maker", with expertise in urban land management. The Specialising Master will take place with a dual training programme, constituted by both frontline and online teaching. The participation method is supplemented by a further 120 hours of seminars aimed at orienting students towards the world of work, followed by professional experience through the development of a single project. Online teaching is managed by the CISE consortium.

Subject areas are 6: Built Environment; Economics and Strategy; Law; Human Sciences; Art and Design; Communication. Each area comprises units of different subjects. Each unit is usually a multiple of 11 hours and will take place in a period of two weeks only on Fridays (morning and afternoon) and Saturdays (only morning). Workshops and training period will take place on remaining week-days during periods to be arranged or after the end of lectures. Some lectures comprise distance-learning.

In all areas a strong integration between the humanistic and the technical perspectives is to be found: programmes aim at developing the ability to comprehend institutional roles and socioeconomic dynamics without underlining single competences.
